Performance Notes

This arrangement of Geminiani's Concerto Grosso for string orchestra (which appeared in 1729) has been made from the 1961 Schott Edition supplemented with information from the facsimile of the 1753 score published by Le Clerc (see section 2.2.2.1 on http://imslp.org/wiki/12_Violin_Sonatas,_Op.5_\(Corelli,_Arcangelo\)\)))).

Geminiani studied with Arcangelo Corelli between 1704 and 1706, and his string orchestral score is an arrangement of Corelli's violin sonata (Op 5, No 12), which was published on January 1st 1700. In turn, Corelli's sonata was a set of variations based on "La folia" (follia in Italian) which is a dance tune of Portuguese origin, dating back to the 15th century. For more details of the origins of the original melody, and of the more than 150 composers that have made use of it over the centuries, see Sarah Kirton (<http://www.folias.nl/literatuur.pdf>) who makes a convincing case for La Folia being "the greatest hit of all time". Notable composers who have based compositions on La Folia are Lully, Marais, D'Anglebert, Couperin, Vivaldi, CPE Bach, Alessandro Scarlatti, Liszt and Rachmaninoff.

While the key is D Minor, the convention has been followed of writing the music with an A Minor key signature with B Flats added as accidentals, where appropriate. The only slurs/bowings shown are the small number included in the Schott Edition, and cello ensembles may well want to add further bowings.

TEMPI: Tempo markings have been based on the Schott and Le Clerc editions of the orchestral version, but have also been informed by the IMC edition of the Corelli Sonata (edited by Francescatti in 1976) and the Gouin, David, Leonard and Conus editions of the original Corelli sonata. Three points are made :

- (a) The main discrepancy between these 7 sources is that Variation 20 is marked Allegro in all the sonata versions, but is marked Adagio in the Schott and LeClerc editions. For that reason "Allegro" has been used in the present arrangement.
- (b) A more minor discrepancy is that some of the violin sonata versions mark the second variation "Allegretto" while others retain the Adagio marking from the first movement . The "Allegretto" marking has been used in the present arrangement.
- (c) All the "Adagio" markings should probably be thought of as "Adagio ma non troppo". This is recommended by Francescatti, and is in line with most recorded versions
- (d) Variation 9 has been marked "Andante" rather than "Adagio" in keeping with the editions of the Corelli sonata
- (e) While most of the editions mark variations 7,13,14 18, 23 and 24 simply as "Allegro", additional markings, principally suggested by David, seem to make musical sense and are given in square brackets. In particular, in performance, a broadening of tempi in the last two variations is customary to indicate that the end of the piece is nigh.

ERRATUM IN SCHOTT EDITION: when the Schott version is compared with all the other versions it is clear that two bars have been omitted in Variation 5 between bars 73 and 74. This has been rectified by the insertion of bars 66 and 67 at this point, but these have been numbered 73A and 73B to keep the overall bar numbering the same as the Schott Edition
